

Rujeko Chenzira

Rujeko belongs to a family of musicians and healers from the Shona tribe of Zimbabwe. Her unique background and knowledge of both Western and African dance, music and culture provide the perfect platform for Rujeko to act as a bridge between the two cultures.

Rujeko has been teaching and performing African Dance at prestigious institutions throughout the US, Canada and Australia since 1994, with outstanding response. In addition, she is both co-founder and artistic director to the Panjea Foundation, a non-profit organization dedicated to bringing African and Western culture together through cultural exchange tours, music and dance conferences and workshops.

Dedicated to sharing her culture through the healing and soul-lifting music and dances of her people, Rujeko is making significant contributions to the study and performance of African dance on a global level.

Heidi Alina

Heidi Alina is distinguished as one of the few prominent female African drummers in the country. Her experience comes from studies in rhythm and group improvisation since the age of five, competitive performance since the age of 8, and study and work with renowned master drummers both here and in Africa for more than 10 years. An engaging teacher, Heidi has a unique ability to integrate Western classical knowledge with innovative teaching techniques and aspects of African culture and spirituality. You'll find her workshops to be positive, encouraging, challenging and fun!

"Out of all my drumming teachers, Heidi is my favorite... she really gives students individual attention and she teaches more than just the standard accompaniments - you learn so much in her classes!"

~Autumn Dull, student
